

God Bless The Children

Sheila Craft

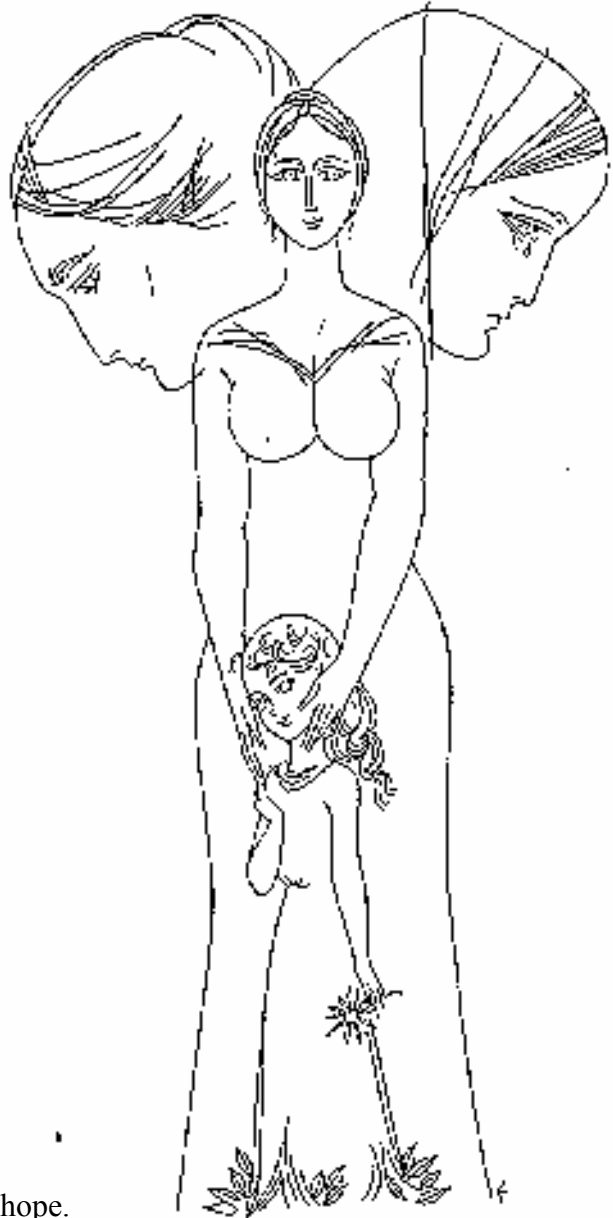

God bless the children
In their rainbow of smiles
In their innocence and dreams
As they pass by us for awhile
In the gifts they give of loving
In the dreams they kindly share
In their wonder at this world of ours.

Bless these flowers of the future
These unfulfilled dreams of ours
The sunlight of their smiles makes
A fresh new day for us.

God bless the children
For tomorrow's dream they bring
In a world full of contradictions
Their truth is a clear song to sing.
If the gods of war would listen
And look in the children's eyes
They would find the real answers
In peaceful children asking "Why?"

I have no answers for the future,
No answers for the now
Tomorrow's needs a'waiting
I'd like to think tomorrow will offer
New horizons.
I'd like to share my meanings with
The future of beginnings.

So bless the children as they dream new dreams
As they lead us to tomorrow in rainbows born of hope.

Drawing: Evgueni Bosyatski