

Spring Blossoming
Teruko Anderson-Jones

The sounds of birds,
multi-voiced accompaniment
to my yoga,
as a breeze enters
through windows long shut against the cold
silence of winter.

Like a resurrection, then this return of life
to a bleached landscape;
blade by blade
bud by bud opening
into an eggshell
sky cracked with light.

Drawing: Cecile Wadlow